APPROACH

John assumes that people have the best intent and want to improve the area or areas they are responsible for. He believes leadership is about supporting an individual to perform at their best within the context of the purpose and values of the organisation. He has valued having mentoring support himself as he believes having someone in your corner with the sole purpose of helping you become a better leader is critical. John believes the role of the coach or mentor is to encourage the mentee to get to know themselves better, provide challenge and offer alternative viewpoints which in itself will lead to better leadership and followership and a better quality of life outside of work.
